Description :

PDF-23e75 | The words of Canadian soldier-doctor-poet John McCrae are called to mind every year on 11 November, for it was his poem "In Flanders Fields," written amid the suffering of the First World War, that inspired the adoption of the poppy as the symbol of remembrance. Born in Canada in 1872, John McCrae studied medicine and served in the South African War before embarking on a career as a physician. Dia... A Crown of Life: The World of John McCrae
