Description :

PDF-7a987 | The clock tower of the Houses of Parliament is known the world over, but is only part of a sprawling neo-Gothic complex built to house the British legislative system. Parliament has been several hundred years in the making and has changed from a mobile assembly gathered only at the king's behest and for his own ends, through to a static Westminster-based democracy that has alternately challenged, ... Parliament and its Buildings (Shire Library)
